WAYLAID MRS. LAWLER.

The Next Night Mrs. Lawler Waylays Him and He Is Captured.

Monday evening at 5:30 o'clock Mrs. Mary Lawier, of Olyphant, having occasion to go to Grassy Island availed herself of a short cut through the word: used by the miners on their way to and from the Grassy Island colliery. As she went along unmindful of harm, a man jumped out from the bushes skirting the path and laid hold of her. She screamed and fought and after a desperate struggle managed to free herself from his grasp and escape.

The assailant was attired in mining clothes and it was conjectured at once when Mrs. Lawler related her experience at home that he was employed at the Grasy Island and could probably be detected. She was quite positive she could identify him and with this end in view she with her husband and a neighbor secreted themselves near the scene of the assault at 5:30 o'clock last evening.

As the workmen pased by on their way from the mine, Mrs. Lawler scanned them closely. Finally one came along in whom she unmistakably recognized her asailant of the evening previous. Her husband and his friend pounced upon him and took him forthwith before 'Squire Cummings who, after a hearing, committed him to the county jail in default of $1,000

The prisoner gave his name as Thomas Smith and his age seventeen. His appearance, however, would indicate that he is older than that. His home is in Olyphant.

THOMAS DEMPSEY TURNS REFORMER

Residents of Johnson's Patch Refuse to Give Him Their Hearty Support.

HE FEELS VERY DOWNHEARTED

Had Several of His Neighbors Arrested for Selling Liquor Without a License, Selling on Sunday and Conducting a Gambling House, but His Witnesses All Testify the Wrong Way and He Will Have to Pay the Costs.

Poor Thomas Dempsey of Johnson's patch today has an overpowering re-alization of how false men can really be if they try To be a prosecutor in four cases and those cases to be a question of public morals and to have three of the four cases go against him in a single night and the probability that the other case will go the same way: to have fourteen or fifteen men whom Dempsey thought were his friends testify that he is "empty-headed" and that the other people are angels and lastly to pay 50 cents apiece to his own witnesses who went against him-it's no joke it's a sad state of affairs in-

So feels Thomas Dempsey and the only friend he has his wife. Dempsey lives in Johnson's patch, which classic locality is in the Sixth ward of Dunmore. He had a grudge against the whole patch or else he wanted to purge the condition of things up there; at any rate he went before Justice of the Peace Cooney, of Dunmore, yesterday afternoon and swore out information for the arrest of Thos. Foley, for gambling and selling liquor on Sunday; Mary O'Hearn, for selling without a license; Thomas Gaughan, selling on Sunday; Michael Finnerty, selling without a license, and he couldn't remember the name of one other law breaker-a woman.

PLENTY OF LIQUOR.

He swore last night "you can get liquor on Sunday or Monday or any other day in any house in the patch.' Warrants were duly issued and served yesterday afternoon by Constable Loftus. The hearing was given two of the cases last night in 'Squire Cooney's office on Chestnut street, Dunmore.

The place was crowded with men from the locality of Johnson's patch. Charles Morris, the three little colored Dempsey was there with his wife and boys who were arrested for stealing shoes from N. Weiss' store, on Penn avenue, were fined $1.60 yesterday by Mayor Bai-A. Zimmerman was counsel for the de-A. Zimmerman was counsel for the defendants. Dempsey's counsel was his wife. 'Squire Cooney said something in French about the incandescent lights which were playing at hide-andseek: and got a lamp, lighted it, and cleared his throat. Then the game went on.

Thomas Foley was the first one to receive his medicine. Foley was arrested for permitting gambling in his hotel and in selling liquor on Sunday. Dempsey swore that he was in Foley's place at 2 o'clock yesterday morning and that he was gambling with cards for money. Mrs. Dempsey fortified her husband's statement with the information that she had looked through the window in Foley's place at 1 o'clock a. m., and had seen money on the table and cards in the hands of men.

"Well, where are your witnesses?" called out Attorney Zimmerman of Demsey.

he called "Michael Gaughan!" Michael Gaughan took the stand and much to Dempsey's surprise he swore that he knew of no gambling in the place and as for Mrs. Dempsey's looking in through the window and seeing the cards and money; why he himself (Gaughan) had fastened the shutter har on a charge of defrauding Mrs. Antonina Zofoskie, of Old Forge. Another phase of the same case was reported at cracks or crevices. Foley, he swore. was a reputable citizen and never sold

DEMPSEY FELT BAD.

Dempsey felt bad when he heard Gaughan thus testifying but he cheered up and called Dominick Dempsey, his "Do you know this man Dempsey?"

"Yes! "What do you think of him?"

asked Attorney Zimmerman.

"Oh, he's a little wild," said the wit-

"A little bit off," suggested Attorney Zimmerman.

'Yes'," responded Dempsey' cousin. Dempsey's face was now really pityful, and his wife wore a worried look.

"Whose your other witnesses?" sarcastically called out Attorney Zimmerman of Dempsey. "I think," said Dempsey falteringly that we'd better adjourn the case. The crowd laughed. "They're all swearin' lies," he continued, which statement was greeted with laughter from the 'Squire Cooney did not feel disposed to continue the case and there was a pause. Finally Dempsey, in peering over the crowd of men, saw James Dempsey another relative, and a resident of the patch. He called him to the stand. This vitness swore about the same as the preceeding ones. Foley kept a respectable place, he said, and there was no telling on Sunday. "What do you think of this man, Dempsey, the prosecutor," asked Actor-ney Zimmerman in a seductive way,

"He's a peculiar fellow," hesitatingly responded the witness as if not wash ing to hurt Dempsey's feelings. Mrs. Dempsey sat through this, nervously Hood's Sarsaparilla grandly supplies. It purifies and vitalizes the blood and clutching her husband's arm. She was his only friend in the room, Demisey then called John Ruane and Ruane swore that he never was in the place. "Come cn, come on," railed Dempsey at the witness, "No, I never was in liver ills.

the place," said Ruane. "I thought so," kindly put in 'Squire Cooney, Dempsey was now very down hearted, "Let it go till tomorrow night," he beseeched, but the 'Squire ruled that as Dempsey had called the witnesses the case should go on. Dempsey again looked about the room but saw no friendly face. "There are all my enemies," he cried, and he gave up the cases against Foley, who was thereupon discharged. The costs were placed on Dempsey. MRS. O'HEARN ON TRIAL.

The next defendant was Mrs. Mary O'Hearn, who was charged with selling liquor without a license. Dempsey braced up when this case was begun. Mrs. O'Hearn was the one person who had caused him to make the raid. She

A puff of wind blowed down the bicycle and when Muscovitz came along he drove his wagon right over it. The wheel was bent all out of shape and made practically useless. H. E.
